Make a direct impact on sustaining the quality of life of another by being a member of a very unique team. StemExpress is a fast growing, Northern California based, privately owned company supporting the stem cell medical research community in disease preventions and cures through the procurement of tissue and maternal and umbilical cord blood. Stem Express proudly serves over 42 universities and 8 private institutions in their research to find cures for 100s of diseases.

With a dual reporting relationship to our director of training and director of operations our regional clinic managers play a vital role in our company's mission by serving as a liaison between StemExpress' procurement technicians and Planned Parenthood management with the primary function of managing StemExpress' staffing, scheduling, training, inventory and supplies, day-to-day clinic and StemExpress protocols particularly in the area of communication, lab requests and results processing, and overall clinic relationships for up to seven Planned Parenthood clinics within a geographic region. Serving as a mentor and primary point of contact for StemExpress' blood and tissue procurement technicians, regional clinic managers staff clinics based on patient levels along with serving as a procurement technician when needed/necessary. Furthermore, managers quality check all documentation including invoices, and researcher requests, from all assigned clinics and upload directly into the company's primary online systems.

In addition to a 40 hour a week time commitment during normal Monday through Friday business hours, an ideal candidate would be professional, positive and passionate about participating in finding cures for some of the most devastating diseases. Required qualifications include a strong knowledge of human anatomy and the ability to demonstrate such knowledge. Furthermore, candidates must have strong supervisory and mentoring experience in a medical clinic setting. Highly desired qualifications include: a completed science degree or one in progress, a California and/or national phlebotomy certification, knowledge and application of sterile and aseptic techniques, flexibility in work schedule, strong written and oral communication skills, ability to drive to various locations, fluent in Spanish and English, unexpired driver's license with up-to-date insurance, familiarity with widely used software such as Microsoft Word, PDF's and web applications, and access to a cell phone, laptop and scrubs.

If you are interested in participating in an expanding and fascinating area of contemporary biology and meet the stated requirements, please forward your resume and cover letter.

At StemExpress, we recognize and respect all people all of the time and are committed to offering a working environment free of discrimination and one of equal employment opportunities.
