INTRODUCTION

2 On February 5, 2016, this Court entered a preliminary injunction against Defendants the 3 Center for Medical Progress (CMP) and David Daleiden. Dkt. 354. Since that time, the California
4 Attorney General charged Mr. Daleiden with fourteen felony counts of unlawful recording and one 5 count of conspiracy to unlawfully record. See Dkt. 434-1. This Court also held him and CMP in 6 contempt of court for uploading enjoined materials to an online file-hosting service to be shared with 7 Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense counsel, and vicariously in contempt when his criminal defense 8 counsel used those videos in his defense. Dkt. 482.

9 Also since this time, two of the Court’s dispositive factual conclusions have been proven 10 false: (1) that Defendants’ project videos did not contain evidence of criminal wrongdoing and 11 (2) that NAF was likely to suffer legally cognizable harm absent an injunction. Two comprehensive 12 congressional investigations both confirmed that Defendants’ investigation generally had merit, 13 that Defendants’ conclusions flowing therefrom were true, and that the material enjoined by this 14 Court will be dispositive in holding numerous NAF members to account for criminal activity. In 15 addition, the examples of irreparable harm to which NAF pointed have since proven not to be 16 legally cognizable harms. Nor have additional examples materialized.

17 Defendants CMP and Daleiden now move for the dissolution or modification of the 18 preliminary injunction. The enjoined materials are necessary for Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense 19 and will be made public if used in his defense—mooting the preliminary injunction. T the same 20 time, many of the Court’s dispositive findings supporting the preliminary injunction have since 21 been proven false, making the preliminary injunction outdated and unsupported.

22 Should the Court not dissolve the preliminary injunction and instead merely modify it, 23 Defendants also move for clarification that it would not violate the modified preliminary injunction 24 for Defendants to comment on, re-publish, or otherwise use enjoined materials that have entered the 25 public domain after being used in Mr. Daleiden’s criminal case.

FACTUAL & PROCEDURAL HISTORY

26
27 The factual history of Defendants’ investigative journalism project, titled for public release 28 the Human Capital Project, is laid out in Defendants’ opposition to Plaintiff’s motion for a

1 preliminary injunction. Dkt. 265-1. The preliminary injunction was entered in this case on February 2 5, 2016, and Defendants promptly appealed. Dkt. 354. It was affirmed on April 4, 2017, via a 3 memorandum opinion. Dkt. 401. A petition for rehearing en banc was denied on May 11, 2017. Dkt.
4 406. A petition for a writ of certiorari was denied on April 3, 2018. Dkt. 524.

5 On April 5, 2016, the California Attorney General raided Mr. Daleiden's home seizing all of 6 CMP's undercover video footage related to the Human Capital Project. Since then, the California 7 Attorney General charged Mr. Daleiden with fourteen felony counts of unlawful recording under 8 Cal. Pen. Code § 632, and one count of conspiracy to unlawfully record. See Dkt. 434-1; The People
9 of the State of California v. David Robert Daleiden, et al., No. 2502505 (Cal. Super. Ct., Mar. 28, 10 2017). On July 17, 2017, this Court held Defendants CMP and Daleiden in contempt for uploading 11 enjoined materials to an online file-hosting service to be shared with Mr. Daleiden's criminal 12 defense counsel, and vicariously in contempt for the actions of those criminal defense counsel in 13 using those videos in his defense in the criminal case. Dkt. 482.

14 LEGAL STANDARD

15 1. Motion for a Preliminary Injunction

16 "A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must show that: (1) she is likely to succeed on 17 the merits, (2) she is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, (3) the 18 balance of equities tips in her favor, and (4) an injunction is in the public interest." Garcia v. Google, 19 Inc., 786 F.3d 733, 740 (9th Cir. 2015) (en banc) (quotation marks omitted). A request for injunctive 20 relief must be denied both when the plaintiff cannot show he is likely to succeed on the merits and 21 when he cannot show irreparable harm. Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 129 S.Ct. 365, 375-76 22 (2008). A court ruling on an injunction "must balance the competing claims of injury and must 23 consider the effect on each party of the granting or withholding of the requested relief[;] . . . a 24 federal judge sitting as chancellor is not mechanically obligated to grant an injunction for every 25 violation of law." Amoco Production Co. v. Village of Gambell, Alaska, 480 U.S. 531, 542 (1987).

26 2. Motion to Dissolve or Modify a Preliminary Injunction

27 "A district court has inherent authority to modify a preliminary injunction in consideration 28 of new facts." A&M Records, Inc. v. Napster, Inc., 284 F.3d 1091, 1098 (9th Cir. 2002). "A party

1 seeking modification of an injunction bears the burden of establishing that a significant change in 2 facts or law warrants revision of the injunction.” State v. Trump, 871 F.3d 646, 654 (9th Cir. 2017)
3 (quotation marks and ellipses omitted). Typically, a motion to modify or dissolve a preliminary 4 injunction is limited to new facts or law, and consequently, “[a] motion to modify or dissolve an 5 injunction cannot be used to challenge the imposition of the original injunction.” U.S. ex rel. F.T.C.
6 v. Bus. Recovery Servs. LLC, 488 F. App’x 188, 189-90 (9th Cir. 2012). “On the other hand, a 7 modification may be so fundamental to the original injunction, or may otherwise present issues so 8 inextricable from the validity of the original injunction, that review must include the whole 9 package.” Gon v. First State Ins. Co., 871 F.2d 863, 866-67 (9th Cir. 1989). “A court abuses its 10 discretion when it refuses to modify an injunction or consent decree in light of a significant change 11 either in factual conditions or in law that renders continued enforcement detrimental to the public 12 interest.” Flores v. Huppenthal, 789 F.3d 994, 1001 (9th Cir. 2015) (quotation marks omitted).

13 When the preliminary injunction is one against speech, a review of the whole package is also 14 compelled by the Constitution. See Old Dominion Branch No. 496, National Ass’n of Letter Carriers 15 v. Austin, 418 U.S. 264, 282 (1974) (When a case involves free expression, “we must make an 16 independent examination of the whole record so as to assure ourselves that the judgment does not 17 constitute a forbidden intrusion on the field of free expression.”); see also Hurley v. Irish American 18 GLIB, 515 U.S. 557, 567-68 (1995).

19 3. Motion to Clarify a Preliminary Injunction

20 “[A] person subject to an injunction always has the right to ask the court that is 21 administering it whether it applies to conduct in which the person proposes to engage. If this looks 22 like a request for an ‘advisory opinion,’ it is one that even a federal court can grant, in order to 23 prevent unwitting contempts, and frequently does.” Matter of Hendrix, 986 F.2d 195, 200 (7th Cir.
24 1993). “[C]ourts would not be apt to withhold a clarification in the light of a concrete situation that 25 left parties in the dark as to their duty toward the court.” Daniels Health Scis., L.L.C. v. Vascular 26 Health Scis., L.L.C., 710 F.3d 579, 586 (5th Cir. 2013) (quoting Regal Knitwear Co. v. NLRB, 324 27 U.S. 9, 15 (1945)) (ellipses omitted). “At the [preliminary injunction] hearing [in this action, the 28 Court] cautioned defense counsel that in the future, before they take it upon themselves to arguably

1 violate an order from this Court—even if in good faith—they should seek clarification from [the 2 Court] first.” Dkt. 354 at 16 n.18; see also Dkt. 482 at 19 n. 22 (“[T]he civil case defense counsel 3 adopted the appropriate approach, seeking guidance in advance.”); Dkt. 540 at 2 (“If anyone in the 4 cases in this Court has a question about the propriety of modifying an Order of this Court, he, she 5 or it should make a request of this Court before acting.”).

6 LEGAL ARGUMENT

7 1. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

8 1.1. The legal reasoning in the Court’s preliminary injunction order

9 In 2016, this Court found—based on the record before it—that it was likely that NAF would 10 be able to show: (1) that Defendants entered into a contract with NAF (Dkt. 354 at 21:1-22:8); 11 (2) that Defendants breached that contract (id. at 22:9-23:10);¹ (3) that the contract broadly covered 12 all information learned at NAF conferences (id. at 23:11-26:9); (4) that the contract permits a prior 13 restraint on speech due to Defendants’ waiver of their First Amendment rights (id. at 27:15-29:9); 14 (5) that the waiver is enforceable after weighing public policy interests (id. at 29:10-35:7); (6) that NAF 15 has suffered harm (id. at 32:26-33:1, 36:14-37:6); and (7) that liability for that harm can be imputed to 16 Defendants (id. at 37:7-12 & n.42). All seven of these findings were absolutely necessary for the 17 Court to enter its Preliminary Injunction in this case. Since February 2016, however, significant 18 changes have occurred with respect to the fifth, sixth, and seventh findings.

19 1.2. The factual reasoning in the Court’s preliminary injunction order

20 Two of the Court’s dispositive factual conclusions in the February 2016 preliminary 21 injunction order either have been proven false, or have—in the two-and-a-half years since—failed 22 to be supported with any evidence. First, (a), the Court preliminarily concluded that “the 23 recordings relied on by defendants [contain] no evidence of criminal wrongdoing.” Dkt. 354 at 24 30:14-15. Second, (b), the Court preliminarily concluded that “since defendants’ release of the 25 Project videos (as well as the leak of a portion of the NAF recordings), harassment, threats, and 26

27 ¹ Of note, a detailed examination of the alleged breaches, and an explanation as to how they are 28 inadequately pleaded, is included in Defendants’ concurrently filed motion to dismiss.

1 violent acts taken against NAF members and facilities have increased dramatically. It is not 2 speculative to expect that harassment, threats, and violent acts will continue to rise if defendants 3 were to release NAF materials in a similar way.” Id. at 32:26-33:1.

4 Both erroneous factual conclusions are necessary to find that (6) NAF suffered actual harm;
 5 and (7) liability for that harm can be imputed to Defendants. But in the past two-and-a-half years, 6 many of the examples of harm NAF put forth have been disproven or repudiated, revealing that 7 NAF has suffered no real harm. Also, in the ensuing years, Defendants’ investigation has been 8 vindicated. Therefore, Defendants cannot be liable for harm flowing from their truthful speech.

9 Both erroneous factual conclusions were also used by the Court as part of (5), its balancing 10 of whether public policy interests permit the enforcement of a waiver of First Amendment rights. In 11 addition to being proven false, additional facts have arisen which weigh heavily on the scale 12 balancing the interests. Since February 2016, Mr. Daleiden has become the subject of a politically 13 motivated criminal prosecution brought by the California Attorney General’s office.

14 In sum, the repudiation of two core factual conclusions and the prosecution of Mr. Daleiden 15 negate the Court’s fifth, sixth, and seventh legal conclusions, warranting dissolution, or at least 16 modification, of the preliminary injunction.

17 1.3. The Court’s Conclusion That Defendants’ Investigation Lacked Legitimacy 18 And Their Conclusions Lacked Veracity, Has Been Proven False

19 As stated above, two congressional investigations have repudiated this Court’s preliminary 20 conclusions that Defendants’ investigation lacked legitimacy and their conclusions lacked veracity.
 21 Those investigations’ conclusions are outlined in the Declaration of David Daleiden, ¶¶ 6-48.

22 Further, in its Preliminary Injunction order, the Court stated that:

23 [T]his is not a typical freedom of speech case. Nor is this a typical 24 “newsgathering” case where courts refuse to impose prior restraints on 25 speech, leaving the remedies for any defamatory publication or breach of 26 contract to resolution post-publication. The context of how defendants 27 came into possession of the NAF materials cannot be ignored and 28 directly supports preliminarily preventing the disclosure of these materials. Defendants engaged in repeated instances of fraud, including
 ... repeated false statements to a numerous [sic] NAF representatives and NAF members in order to infiltrate NAF and implement their Human Capital Project. The products of that Project—achieved in large part from the infiltration—thus far have not been

1 pieces of journalistic integrity, but misleadingly edited videos and 2 unfounded assertions (at least with respect to the NAF materials) of 3 criminal misconduct. Defendants did not—as Daleiden repeatedly 4 asserts—use widely accepted investigatory journalism techniques.

5 Dkt. 354 at 38:16-39:21 (emphasis added). In support of this conclusion, the Court stated that “[i]f 6 the NAF recordings truly demonstrated criminal conduct—the alleged goal of the undercover 7 operation—then CMP would have immediately turned them over to law enforcement.” Dkt. 354 at 8 31:11-13. The Court also distinguished Animal Legal Def. Fund v. Otter, No. 1:14-CV-00104-BLW, 9 2015 WL 4623943 (D. Idaho Aug. 3, 2015), as not clearly holding that undercover investigative 10 journalism was not fraudulent. Dkt. 354 at 40 n. 44.

11 The Court’s conclusion that Defendants’ project videos “have not been pieces of 12 journalistic integrity, but misleadingly edited videos and unfounded assertions” has now been 13 decisively refuted. Dkt. 354 at 39:17-19. As stated in the Daleiden declaration, Congress has 14 determined that Defendants’ full-length videos contain evidence of illegality, and that their shorter 15 videos were produced to summarize that evidence. The Court also cited the Fusion GPS report, 16 commissioned by Planned Parenthood Federation of America, for this proposition. Dkt. 354 at 15:9-17 13. But Planned Parenthood has since repudiated any reliance on that report. Dkt. 286 in Case No.
18 3:16-cv-236, at 7:20-22.

19 With respect to the Court’s argument that “Defendants . . . repeated false statements to 20 numerous NAF representatives” and distinguishing of the district court decision in Animal Legal 21 Defense Fund v. Otter, the Ninth Circuit has now concluded that “a false statement made in order to 22 access a[] . . . facility . . . cannot on its face be characterized as made to effect a fraud”—but rather 23 is protected activity taken in furtherance of First Amendment rights. Animal Legal Def. Fund v.
24 Wasden, 878 F.3d 1184, 1194 (9th Cir. 2018); see also Al-Amyn Sumar, Animal Legal Defense Fund v.
25 Wasden and Newsgathering: More Significant Than It Appears, COMM. LAW., Winter 2018, at 12, 13 26 (“Wasden recognized constitutional protection for newsgathering . . . [t]hat is a major expansion of 27 the right[s] [of the press]—one that, though its precise contours are not entirely clear, has 28 potentially important implications for other kinds of laws that impose liability for engaging in newsgathering activities.”). Defendants’ conduct is thus a quintessentially American exercise of the First Amendment right to freedom of the press.

1 Finally, with respect to the Court’s question why Defendants did not simply turn their 2 video over to law enforcement, subsequently published legal literature shows that Defendants’ 3 strategy of primarily attempting to pressure government action through publication of newsworthy 4 stories, is commonplace—and indeed is best practice:

5 In light of . . . numerous other instances of law enforcement dragging 6 its feet when presented with clear-cut cases of [illegality in politically 7 sensitive areas] . . . proponents of [merely reporting and not 8 publishing evidence of illegality] are left with little ground to stand on. Their claim that law enforcement and regulatory agencies are the ‘proper authorities’ to whom whistleblowers ought to report [illegality] is clearly flawed.

9 See Sarah Hanneken, Principles Limiting Recovery Against Undercover Investigators in Ag-Gag States:
 10 Law, Policy, and Logic, 50 J. MARSHALL L. REV. 649, 685 (2017).

11 1.4. The Court’s Factual Conclusion That Defendants’ Videos Led to Harassment, 12 Threats, and Violence Against Abortion Providers Has Been Proven False

13 In 2016, based on the record before it at that time, this Court found: (1) that “after the 14 release of defendants’ first set of Human Capital Project videos and related information in July 15 2015, there ha[d] been a documented, dramatic increase in the volume and extent of threats to and 16 harassment of NAF and its members” (Dkt. 254 at 2:10-12); (2) that “the release of videos as part 17 of defendants’ Human Capital Project ha[d] directly led to a significant increase in harassment, 18 threats, and violence directed not only at the ‘targets’ of CMP’s videos but also at NAF and its 19 members more generally” (id. at 26:2-5); and (3) that “[i]f defendants [we]re allowed to release the 20 NAF materials, NAF and its members would suffer immediate harms” (id. at 37:9-10). Now, two 21 years later, NAF has no non-hearsay-based evidence to support the above conclusions, and the 22 hearsay-based allegations NAF previously made have been proven false.

23 1.4.1. The Court should not rely on hearsay at this juncture

24 The Court should not consider any hearsay evidence when adjudicating the present motion.
 25 Nor should this Court rely on NAF’s prior hearsay submitted in support of the earlier outdated 26 preliminary injunction. In the preliminary injunction context, a hearsay objection goes to weight, not 27 admissibility. “The urgency of obtaining a preliminary injunction necessitates a prompt 28 determination and makes it difficult to obtain affidavits from persons who would be competent to 1 testify at trial. The trial court may give even inadmissible evidence some weight, when to do so serves 2 the purpose of preventing irreparable harm before trial.” Flynt Distrib. Co. v. Harvey, 734 F.2d 1389, 3 1394 (9th Cir. 1984). But “NAF does not believe any additional discovery is required to resolve . . .

4 NAF’s contract claim.” Dkt. 538 at 8:15-20. The public policy behind permitting the introduction of 5 hearsay evidence to support a motion for a preliminary injunction does not apply here because NAF 6 believes it already possesses all of the non-hearsay evidence it needs.

7 1.4.2. The Court lacks jurisdiction with respect to NAF member harms

8 For purposes of determining whether a district court has diversity jurisdiction, the basic rule 9 is that all plaintiffs must be of different citizenship than all defendants. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 7 U.S.
10 267, 267 (1806). For purposes of determining diversity, it is not the citizenship of the named parties 11 but of the real parties in interest that is determinative. Navarro Sav. Ass’n v. Lee, 446 U.S. 458, 460-12 61 (1980). Therefore, with respect to associations asserting the interests of their members, the 13 citizenship of each of their members must be considered. See, e.g., Nat’l Ass’n of Realtors v. Nat’l 14 Real Estate Ass’n, Inc., 894 F.2d 937, 940 (7th Cir. 1990) (“Since it is the members of NAR who are 15 the real parties in interest so far as the claim for damages on their behalf is concerned, it is their 16 citizenship that counts for diversity purposes.”); Zee Med. Distrib. Ass’n, Inc. v. Zee Med., Inc., 23 F.
17 Supp. 2d 1151, 1156 (N.D. Cal. 1998) (“The Court must . . . look to the citizenship of ZMDA’s 18 individual members for the purpose of determining whether complete diversity exists. Because 19 some of these members are California citizens, and because defendant Zee Medical is a California 20 citizen as well, complete diversity is destroyed.”).

21 Here, NAF is “a professional association of abortion providers” whose “members include 22 individuals, private and non-profit clinics, Planned Parenthood affiliates, women’s health centers, 23 physicians’ offices, and hospitals.” Dkt. 131, ¶10. NAF brought its breach of contract claim explicitly 24 on behalf of its members—many of which are California citizens. Dkt. 66, ¶¶196, 200. NAF originally 25 alleged that this Court had both diversity jurisdiction and federal subject matter jurisdiction. Dkt. 131, 26 ¶24. But NAF’s federal claims have since been dismissed. Dkt. 542. Without those claims, this Court 27 lacks subject matter jurisdiction due to a lack of diversity. And if NAF were somehow able to avoid 28 dismissal by asserting only its own interests to the exclusion of its members’, the Court could not then

1 include the interests of those NAF members in its harm analysis when re-evaluating the propriety of 2 the outdated and unsupported preliminary injunction.

3 1.4.3. NAF’s examples of irreparable harm have been proven false

4 Plaintiff NAF’s monitors the Internet to curate misleading reports on the threat of harm to 5 abortion providers from individuals who hold the “common and respectable,” “opposition to 6 abortion” position. Bray v. Alexandria Women’s Health Clinic, 506 U.S. 263, 270 (1993); Dkt. 59, 7 FAC at ¶30 (listing statistics). Curiously, NAF chose not to release their 2015 statistics on 8 “Violence and Disruption” until April 2016—two months after this Court made its preliminary 9 injunction findings. See Daleiden Decl., Ex. 11, p.1. Those statistics, along with Planned 10 Parenthood’s corroborating reports, show that there was no significant increase in actual threats of 11 harm allegedly attributable to Defendants. Daleiden Decl., Exs. 11-16. This is outlined in the 12 concurrently filed Declaration of David Daleiden, ¶¶ 49-67.

13 In addition to instances of violence, however, NAF’s statistics include instances of 14 “disruption,” which primarily consist of First Amendment protected speech.² The “disruption” 15 statistics do significantly increase post-release of Defendants’ investigation, but that actually cuts 16 against NAF’s arguments. Because of Defendants’ investigation, there was an 800% increase in 17 protected speech about abortion. Various jurists have suggested that courts should not weigh 18 protected speech about abortion as a basis for judicial intervention. Cf. Nat’l Inst. of Family & Life
19 Advocates, 138 S. Ct. 2361, 2388 (2018) (NIFLA) (Breyer, J., dissenting) (“[T]he majority’s decision 20 [] mean[s] that speech about abortion is special”); McCullen v. Coakley, 134 S. Ct. 2518, 2545 (2014)
21 (Scalia, J., concurring) (The majority “treat[s] abortion-related speech as a special category”).

22 First, it is bald viewpoint discrimination to “facilitate speech on only one side of the abortion 23 debate.” McCullen, 134 S. Ct. at 2534. It would be highly improper for the Court to hold that 24 Defendants’ First Amendment advocacy must be restrained because it has been too successful, inspiring 25 many other people to engage in their own protected speech about abortion. Second, the highly debated 26 and “[] controversial” nature of abortion means that speech about abortion merits special protection and

27 ² In contrast to “violence,” which includes unprotected speech such as “threats of harm.”
28

1 cannot even be regulated in the commercial speech context. NIFLA, 138 S. Ct. at 2366. Finally, 2 Defendants’ speech does not burden others’ constitutional abortion-related rights. Providing truthful 3 information about abortion practices per se cannot impose an undue burden on others’ ability to access 4 abortion. NIFLA, 138 S. Ct. at 2384 (Breyer, J., dissenting) (citing Planned Parenthood of Se.
5 Pennsylvania v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 882 (1992)). Because Congress has now determined that 6 Defendants’ allegations were true, it would be improper for the Court to hold that third-parties’ 7 repetition of Defendants’ speech infringes different third-parties’ ability to access abortion.

8 In light of these precedents and the unique nature of abortion-related speech generally, it 9 would be improper for the Court to consider NAF’s “disruption” statistics, except to support the 10 proposition that the Court should step back and not attempt to interfere with the national debate on 11 abortion that the statistics show is occurring.

12 1.5. Mr. Daleiden’s politically motivated criminal prosecution tilts the balancing of 13 public interests in his favor

14 1.5.1. Background of the Court’s balancing of public interests

15 Prior restraints on speech have only been permitted in four contexts, one of which is where 16 the parties engage in a knowing and voluntary waiver. Leonard v. Clark, 12 F.3d 885 (9th Cir. 1993).
17 But in this context—which this Court found applied here—the courts “will not enforce the waiver 18 if the interest in its enforcement is outweighed in the circumstances by a public policy harmed by 19 enforcement of the agreement.” Id. at 890 (quotation marks and citation omitted). This is because 20 “[p]rior restraints fall on speech with a brutality and a finality all their own. Even if they are 21 ultimately lifted they cause irremediable loss[,] a loss in the immediacy, the impact, of speech.
22 Indeed it is the hypothesis of the First Amendment that injury is inflicted on our society when we 23 stifle the immediacy of speech.” Nebraska Press Ass’n v. Stuart, 427 U.S. 539, 609 (1976) (quoting 24 A. BICKEL, THE MORALITY OF CONSENT 61 (1975)) (ellipses omitted).

25 As stated above, the Court found that public policy supported applying an alleged waiver (fifth 26 legal conclusion). In so doing, the Court balanced: (1) evidence of illegality in the enjoined materials 27 (Dkt. 30:14-19); (2) evidence of a de-sensitization in the attitudes of abortion industry participants (id.
28 at 31:14-32:4); (3) California’s explicit interest in protecting abortion providers by hiding information

1 about them (id. at 32:10-33:3); and (4) the constitutional right to privacy and how that right regulates 2 governmental action relating to abortion (id. at 1:28-2:3, 39:5-6).

3 The Court initially found that (1), (3), and (4) favored the injunction because there was no 4 evidence of illegality in the enjoined materials—a conclusion which has since been proven false. See 5 Daleiden Declaration. This new factual development—in addition to refuting (1) directly, also affects 6 (3). The statutes the Court cited provide that the purpose of hiding information about the abortion 7 industry in general, and abortion providers specifically, is to ensure access to “the provision of legal 8 reproductive health care services.” Cal. Gov’t Code § 6215(c). But on the other hand, California does 9 not have an interest in ensuring access to the provision of unethical reproductive health care services 10 that violate state and federal law. See Cal. Pen. Code § 423.6(c) (The California Freedom of Access to 11 Clinic Entrances Act “shall not be construed . . . [t]o interfere with the enforcement of any federal, 12 state, or local laws regulating the performance of abortions or the provision of other reproductive 13 health services.”). Thus, since it has been determined that the enjoined videos do contain evidence of 14 illegality, those statutes no longer support the injunction.

15 How (4), the constitutional right to privacy, might affect the balancing of interests was not 16 briefed by any of the parties. This factor actually, however, cuts against any injunction against 17 speech because, as stated above, speech about abortion is special. NIFLA, 138 S. Ct. at 2366; id. at 18 2388 (Breyer, J., dissenting); McCullen, 134 S. Ct. at 2534. In light of its special nature, it is simply 19 incorrect to view the constitutional regulation of abortion as lending support to an injunction 20 against speech regarding abortion. In fact, the opposite is true: the constitutional paradigm 21 precludes courts influencing the national debate by imposing regulations on speech.

22 In addition to these factors, the Court must now balance (5) the additional factor of Mr.
23 Daleiden’s right to defend himself against criminal charges for unlawful recording, and (6) the fact 24 that Mr. Daleiden’s defense of himself will cause materials to enter the public domain.

25 1.5.2. Mr. Daleiden has a Sixth Amendment right to have his criminal defense 26 counsel publicly defend him

27 Countering negative publicity about a criminal defendant is not merely a permissible activity for 28 a criminal defense attorney; it is a necessary part of a vigorous defense. See Gentile v. State Bar of

1 Nevada, 501 U.S. 1030 (1991). Gentile involved a state bar disciplinary proceeding where Attorney
 2 Gentile was sanctioned for a press conference he held to defend his client after the press had pushed out 3 a stream of information, beginning long before his client’s indictment, suggesting that his client was 4 guilty. Id. at 1064 (“Petitioner’s admitted purpose for calling the press conference was to counter public 5 opinion which he perceived as adverse to his client, to fight back against the perceived efforts of the 6 prosecution to poison the prospective juror pool, and to publicly present his client’s side of the case.”).

7 The Supreme Court stated that such a press conference was absolutely within the rights and 8 duties of a criminal defense attorney:

9 An attorney’s duties do not begin inside the courtroom door. He 10 or she cannot ignore the practical implications of a legal proceeding 11 for the client. . . . [A]n attorney may take reasonable steps to defend a 12 client’s reputation and reduce the adverse consequences of 13 indictment, especially in the face of a prosecution deemed unjust or commenced with improper motives. A defense attorney may pursue lawful strategies to obtain dismissal of an indictment or reduction of charges, including an attempt to demonstrate in the court of public opinion that the client does not deserve to be tried.

14 Id. at 1043 (emphasis added). Further, although Defendants could find no case discussing the 15 parameters of the “attorney’s dut[y]” to defend his client in the court of public opinion, legal 16 literature makes clear that this ethical duty is constitutional in nature.

17 The Sixth Amendment right to the assistance of counsel, in 18 conjunction with due-process and fair-trial rights, would seem to 19 require attorneys to actively seek to counterbalance a client’s 20 negative public image. In high-profile cases, the only way some 21 lawyers can offer clients their Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial is to set the record straight in the media in hopes that accurate reporting will create a neutral litigation environment. In other words, 22 to assure a fair trial, public advocacy is an essential part of a 23 defense strategy.

22 Michael Jay Hartman, Yes, Martha Stewart Can Even Teach Us About the Constitution: Why
 23 Constitutional Considerations Warrant an Extension of the Attorney-Client Privilege in High-Profile Criminal 24 Cases, 10 U. PA. J. CONST. L. 867, 879 (2008) (quotation marks and ellipses omitted; emphasis added).

25 Literally thousands of news articles have been published about Defendants’ investigation into 26 wrongdoing by NAF members, about the subsequent lawsuits, about the subsequent investigations 27 into and admissions of wrongdoing by NAF-members, and about the politically motivated prosecution 28 of Mr. Daleiden. Despite the fact that Defendants’ investigation has been proven legitimate, many 1 members of the public—including residents of San Francisco County from whom the jury pool in Mr.

2 Daleiden’s criminal case would be drawn—still believe that Mr. Daleiden is “already guilty” because 3 of this Court’s preliminary injunction, because of NAF and Planned Parenthood talking points, and 4 because of public statements by the California Attorney General.

5 In issuing the preliminary injunction, the Court noted that it was a first-of-its-kind injunction, 6 but stated that “this is not a typical freedom of speech case. Nor is this a typical ‘newsgathering’ case 7 where courts refuse to impose prior restraints on speech. . . . Instead, this is an exceptional case 8 [because] . . . there is a constitutional right to abortions.” Dkt. 354 at 38:16-39:6. This case is also 9 exceptional now because of the criminal charges filed against Mr. Daleiden. The Sixth Amendment 10 guarantees Mr. Daleiden a fair trial; this Court’s now-outdated and unsupported preliminary 11 injunction itself—along with the Court’s preclusion of Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense counsel from 12 challenging its conclusions publicly—threatens that right. In the absence of this Court’s preliminary 13 injunction, Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense team would presumably be attempting to cure the jury 14 pool of the misimpression created by this Court’s outdated conclusions—expressly contradicted by 15 two congressional investigations—that CMP’s recordings do not show evidence of criminality by 16 NAF attendees. That is their job as his criminal defense counsel, and the preliminary injunction is 17 preventing them from doing it, thereby depriving Mr. Daleiden of a full-throated defense.

18 The Court should incorporate Mr. Daleiden’s Sixth Amendment Rights into its balancing of 19 interests as a very substantial factor favoring dissolution of the preliminary injunction.

20 1.5.3. The Anti-Injunction Act precludes re-issuing the preliminary injunction

21 “A court of the United States may not grant an injunction to stay proceedings in a State court 22 except” in three circumstances, none of which obtains in this case. 28 U.S.C. § 2283. This 23 prohibition tying the hands of federal courts “is comprehensive. It includes all steps taken or which 24 may be taken in the state court or by its officers from the institution to the close of the final process.”
25 Hill v. Martin, 296 U.S. 393, 403 (1935); see Timmerman v. Brown, 528 F.2d 811, 814 (4th Cir. 1975).

26 Federal courts must be equally restrained with respect to injunctions, like the preliminary 27 injunction in this case, that tie the hands of parties to a state court proceeding: “It is settled that the 28 prohibition of § 2283 cannot be evaded by addressing the [injunction] to the parties” instead of the 1 state court itself. Atl. Coast Line R. Co. v. Bhd. of Locomotive Engineers, 398 U.S. 281, 287 (1970);

2 Furnish v. Bd. of Med. Examiners of Cal., 257 F.2d 520, 522-23 (9th Cir. 1958) (same). “[T]he Act’s 3 prohibition on enjoining state court proceedings applies to any such proceeding pending at the time 4 the federal court acts on the request for injunctive relief, regardless of when the state court action 5 was filed.” Denny’s, Inc. v. Cake, 364 F.3d 521, 531 (4th Cir. 2004); see also Monster Beverage Corp.
6 v. Herrera, No. EDCV 13-00786-VAP (OPX), 2013 WL 12131740, at *10 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 16, 2013) 7 (identifying circuit split on applicability of § 2283 depending on whether state or federal case was 8 filed first and siding with Denny’s and majority of circuits), aff’d, 650 F. App’x 344 (9th Cir. 2016).

9 In addition to the Anti-Injunction Act itself, the policies of comity and federalism underlying 10 it weigh forcefully against maintaining the preliminary injunction in this case. A “[c]ourt [sh]ould 11 exercise its discretion in light of the principles of equity, comity and federalism and refrain from 12 granting an injunction that would effectively enjoin the state court proceeding.” Monster, 2013 WL 13 12131740, at *11; see also Rizzo v. Goode, 423 U.S. 362, 379 (1976) (same). “Any doubts as to the 14 propriety of a federal injunction against state court proceedings should be resolved in favor of 15 permitting the state courts to proceed in an orderly fashion to finally determine the controversy. . . .
16 [T]he fundamental principle of a dual system of courts leads inevitably to that conclusion.” Atl. Coast 17 Line R. Co., 398 U.S. at 297. This is especially true here, where the NAF conference attendees whose 18 rights NAF purports to advance here in federal court are the very complaining witnesses who 19 successfully secured the prosecution of Mr. Daleiden in state court. Well-funded and well-connected 20 parties who resent Mr. Daleiden’s exposure of their misconduct are conducting a well-coordinated 21 campaign to punish and silence him. This Court should not permit itself to be coopted into that 22 campaign by enabling them to use one of their two heavy-handed civil lawsuits against Mr. Daleiden to 23 handicap his defense against the criminal charges they trumped up against him.

24 The Anti-Injunction Act should prevent this Court from re-issuing its preliminary 25 injunction against Defendants in the face of Defendants’ motion to dissolve. Contrary to the 26 intention of the Anti-Injunction Act, the federal injunction in this case prevents Mr. Daleiden’s 27 criminal defense counsel from defending him effectively in public by sealing from view the chief 28 evidence of his innocence. See Gentile, 501 U.S. at 1043. This Court should apply the Act and its 1 strong interest in comity to dissolve the injunction.

2 1.5.4. Judge Hite’s protective order supersedes the preliminary injunction

3 This Court has stated that “it shall not be a violation of the Preliminary Injunction or other 4 Orders of this Court if Judge Hite requires some modification” of them. Dkt. 540 at 2. Judge Hite 5 has already required that modification by imposing in the criminal case a protective order that 6 supersedes the preliminary injunction. On December 6, 2017, Judge Christopher Hite issued a 7 protective order in the criminal case. Daleiden Decl., Ex. 19. That order states:

8 1. . . . [M]aterials that portray, relate to, or mention the fourteen 9 Does named in the complaint shall not be disclosed to anyone except 10 the defendant, his counsel of record and any defense investigators or 11 experts working on the case, absent further order of the Court. These 12 materials shall be used only in preparation of the defense in this 13 proceeding.

14 2. No picture, screenshot or other visual representation shall be 15 made, exhibited, displayed or used in any fashion by the defendant of 16 materials that portray, relate to, or mention the fourteen Does except 17 in a judicial proceeding or as may be directly necessary in the 18 preparation of the defense of this action.

19 3. . . . [M]aterials that portray, relate to, or mention the fourteen 20 Does shall not be put on the Internet for any reason.

21 Ex. 19, ¶¶ 1-3; see also Ex. 21, Transcript of Dec. 6, 2017, hearing, 5:28-6:1 (clarification that the 22 protective order does not merely cover the hard drive mentioned in the protective order, but rather 23 “the protective order applies to the 14 Does as named”).

24 Judge Hite was aware of this Court’s preliminary injunction and of Mr. Daleiden’s constitutional 25 right to use enjoined videos in his defense when it issued that order. See Ex. 20, Transcript of June 21, 26 2017, hearing, 4:22-5:2 (Judge Hite taking judicial notice of preliminary injunction); Ex. 22, Transcript of 27 Jan. 10, 2018, hearing, 16:16-18 (Judge Hite stating he already addressed constitutional issues at June 21, 28 2017, hearing). Yet, in issuing that protective order he specifically referenced a hard drive provided by the Attorney General to the defense containing the NAF materials, with the only restriction imposed on materials within it that “portray, relate to, or mention the 14 Does.” Ex. 19. In issuing that protective order, Judge Hite expressly stated: “There will be no blanket protective order as to all the issues in this case. The Court will address any concerns by the Attorney General’s Office or anyone else regarding specific requests for protective order materials on an individual basis rather than a blanket basis.” Ex. 21, 1 4:28-5:8. That order contradicts the blanket ban imposed by the preliminary injunction.

2 The purpose of the protective order is to keep the complaining witnesses as “Does” in the 3 public complaint until the preliminary hearing is held. See Ex. 22, 12:15-14:4 (In hearing on motion to set 4 aside the protective order, DAG Jauron arguing that motion to set aside the protective order will be 5 mooted by preliminary hearing), 14:20-16:9, 19:3-4, 19:19-20 (Judge Hite expressing concern about Mr.
6 Daleiden’s right to publicly challenge statements by Does about him, but overruling motion to set aside 7 protective order because he has only imposed a “limited delay” until the preliminary hearing, and a 8 “limited . . . restriction” on Mr. Daleiden’s right to a public defense). And Judge Hite has already 9 indicated that he will not close the preliminary hearing to the public. See Daleiden Decl., ¶¶ 68-76.

10 Any videos other than those that “portray, relate to, or mention the 14 Does” are free to be 11 publicly released and discussed under Judge Hite’s order. This includes NAF videos of witnesses 12 who were interviewed by the California Attorney General’s office and whose testimony and video 13 are a core part of Mr. Daleiden’s defense that the conversations recorded at NAF conferences were 14 not confidential under Cal. Pen. Code § 632. This also includes NAF videos of abortion providers 15 whose discussion of partial-birth abortion is a key part of Mr. Daleiden’s Cal. Pen. Code § 633.5 16 defense. Judge Hite similarly excluded many other videos from his protective order.

17 This Court directed Mr. Daleiden to wait for Judge Hite to issue an order with respect to 18 the videos, and he has. Dkt. 540 at 2. Thus, Defendants request that the Court dissolve its 19 preliminary injunction on the basis that it has been superseded by Judge Hite’s protective order.

20 1.5.5. Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense strategy hinges on use of enjoined videos

21 At this juncture, Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense counsel intend to make two primary 22 defenses in his criminal case, under Cal. Pen. Code §§ 632 and 633.5. Under § 632, it is unlawful to 23 surreptitiously record a “confidential communication.” But “a conversation is [only] confidential 24 under section 632 if a party to that conversation has an objectively reasonable expectation that the 25 conversation is not being overheard or recorded.” Flanagan v. Flanagan, 27 Cal. 4th 766, 776-77 26 (2002). “[A] communication is not confidential when the parties may reasonably expect other 27 persons to overhear it.” Lieberman v. KCOP Television, Inc., 110 Cal. App. 4th 156, 168 (2003).

28 Under § 633.5, it is permissible to record a “confidential communication” if the recording

1 was done “for the purpose of obtaining evidence reasonably believed to relate to the commission . . . of 2 the crime of . . . any felony involving violence against the person.” (Emphasis added); see also People v.
 3 Ayers, 51 Cal. App. 3d 370, 377 (1975) (exception applies to both police and private citizens). No
 4 California court has explained exactly what it means to record “for the purpose of obtaining evidence 5 reasonably believed to relate to the commission” of a felony involving violence, but the Ninth Circuit 6 has interpreted it. Gensburg v. Lipset, 121 F.3d 715, 1997 WL 453698 (9th Cir. 1997).³

7 In Gensburg, the Ninth Circuit upheld the granting of summary judgment in favor of the 8 defendant in a case that dealt exclusively with the parameters of § 633.5:

9 Even if [the surreptitious recorder] might have reason to be skeptical of 10 [the informant’s] account, he had no reason to doubt that recording her 11 conversations with [the recorder] would “relate to” the commission by 12 [the recorder] innocent, by proving her guilty, or by being indeterminate, but however the evidence turned out, it would be precisely for this statutorily permitted purpose.

13 Id. at *3. Gensburg stands for the proposition that “reasonably believed to relate” means that 14 § 633.5 permits recording conversations for the purpose of investigating criminal activity, not just 15 gathering evidence of criminal activity. Id. The individual who is performing the recording merely 16 needs to reasonably believe that the recording will relate to his investigation of potential criminal 17 activity. Id. He does not need to have a reasonable belief that the individuals he is recording are 18 actually engaged in criminal activity. Id.

19 In his criminal case, Mr. Daleiden’s defense counsel thus intend to play footage to establish 20 (1) that the allegedly unlawful recordings all took place in public where there was an opportunity for 21 the conversation to be overheard, (2) that the recordings obtained evidence of illegal activity, and 22 (3) that there is no evidence that the recordings were made for anything other than a legitimate 23 investigation into wrongdoing, “by proving [the NAF members] innocent, by proving [them] guilty, 24 or by being indeterminate.”

25
 26 ³ This Ninth Circuit opinion is unpublished. Defendants here cite it only for factual purposes, to 27 explain the argument that Mr. Daleiden intends to make in his criminal case, as the opinion is 28 properly citable in California courts. See Ninth Circuit Rule 36-3(c) (“Unpublished dispositions . . . may be cited to this Court or by any other courts in this circuit for factual purposes”).

1 1.5.6. This Court’s orders conflict with Mr. Daleiden’s rights under California 2 law and rule

3 This Court has issued a number of seemingly conflicting rulings about Mr. Daleiden’s 4 criminal case. The Court once stated that it “will not interfere with Judge Hite’s determinations 5 concerning . . . what portion of the relevant recordings should become publicly accessible or 6 disclosed in connection with the criminal pre-trial and trial proceedings.” Dkt. 482 at 20:19-21. But 7 then this Court more recently ruled that “Judge Hite will make determinations of what is required 8 with respect to Mr. Daleiden’s due process rights in that criminal matter” and specifically stated 9 “[d]on’t independently make that decision without Judge Hite making the decision.” Dkt. 298 in 10 Case No. 3:16-cv-236, at 27:25-28:2, 28:20-21. This appears to be a reversal from this Court’s 11 hands-off approach in its ruling concerning Mr. Daleiden’s testimony before a grand jury 12 proceeding in Harris County, Texas. Dkt. 354 at 41 n.45 (“[D]efendants appropriately notified the 13 Court that CMP was subpoenaed to testify in front of a grand jury, and explained that if Daleiden 14 was called upon to disclose information he learned at the NAF Annual Meetings in responding to 15 the grand jury’s questions, Daleiden intended to do so absent further order from this Court. Dkt.
16 No. 323-5. This Court did nothing to prevent Daleiden from testifying fully in front of that grand 17 jury.”); Dkt. 482 at 18 n.22 (“[C]ounsel notified me that a defendant received a grand jury 18 subpoena from a local law enforcement agency and that they expected the testimony and responses 19 called for might touch upon or disclose PI information. . . . No response from me was necessary”).

20 In his criminal case, Mr. Daleiden’s defense counsel intend to zealously represent him and 21 assert his full rights under the California Penal Code, California statute, and the California
22 Constitution. They intend to enter into evidence, in open court and in the court record, NAF 23 conference footage that is currently enjoined in this Court, along with the summary video whose 24 use in Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense has already resulted in a finding of contempt here. His 25 counsel should not and, under governing law, cannot be required to ask special permission from 26 Judge Hite or to give special advance notice to prosecutors before examining or cross-examining 27 witnesses using any of the NAF video footage, nor are they required to do so under any known 28 California law or rule. And they absolutely should not be required to seek an order from Judge Hite

1 modifying this Court’s preliminary injunction, nor do they believe he would or should entertain a 2 request to issue an order from his bench that would purport to modify a federal court’s injunction.

3 Further, after those videos are entered into evidence, they will become part of the public 4 domain. Nebraska Press Ass’n, 427 U.S. at 568 (“[O]nce a public hearing had been held, what 5 transpired there could not be subject to prior restraint.”); see also id. at 595–96 (Brennan, J., 6 concurring) (“What transpires in the court room is public property. . . . Those who see and hear 7 what transpired can report it with impunity.”) Any purported interest in keeping the videos private 8 will vanish. To ensure a fair trial, Mr. Daleiden’s criminal defense counsel also intend to publish all 9 of the same evidence on the internet, and make it available to the media to review, comment on, and 10 discuss. Without doing so, there will be no public rebuttal of this Court’s preliminary (and now 11 disproven) determinations that the videos do not contain evidence of wrongdoing, and that 12 Defendants’ investigation into wrongdoing was illegitimate. To ensure a fair trial, Mr. Daleiden’s 13 criminal defense counsel need to recruit the assistance of the media in countering the propaganda 14 pushed out by the subjects of Mr. Daleiden’s investigation, and their media allies, that Defendants 15 did not uncover evidence of wrongdoing, or that their investigation was never legitimate, or was 16 somehow a smear campaign.

17 This Court should thus weigh in the balance that (1) Mr. Daleiden needs to use the enjoined 18 materials in his defense (against criminal charges secured by Plaintiff NAF’s own members and 19 conference attendees) in open court and in the court of public opinion; and (2) there is no purpose 20 in maintaining the injunction because all, or significant portions, of the video will soon enter the 21 public domain. As soon as only innocuous footage (which poses no potential harm to NAF 22 members) remains actually sealed by the preliminary injunction, the injunction will no longer be 23 warranted or legally justifiable. This Court should therefore decline to continue the injunction at 24 this time, securing the ability of criminal counsel for Mr. Daleiden to defend him fully.

25 1.6. Liability for NAF’s alleged harms can no longer be imputed to Defendants

26 Finally, the Court’s prior factual conclusions that have now been proven false were key to the 27 Court’s preliminary determination on the issue of harm. In the preliminary injunction context, the 28 moving party has two distinct burdens with respect to harm. First, it has to show legally cognizable

1 harm as an element of his argument regarding likelihood of success on the merits. Hickcox-Huffman v.
2 US Airways, Inc., 855 F.3d 1057, 1062 (9th Cir. 2017) (“The essential elements of a breach of contract
3 claim are . . . damages to the plaintiff caused by the breach.”); L. Barber Gems, Inc. v. Brink’s Diamond 4 & Jewelry N. Am., 43 F. App’x 164, 165–66 (9th Cir. 2002) (“In actions for breach of contract, it is 5 essential to establish a causal connection between the breach and the damages sought. Proximate 6 cause is that cause which, in natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any efficient intervening 7 cause, produced the injury or damage complained of and without which such result would not have 8 occurred.”) (citations, quotation marks, and brackets omitted). Second, it has to show that granting 9 the preliminary injunction will preclude those harms from occurring. Perfect 10, Inc. v. Google, Inc., 653
10 F.3d 976, 981 (9th Cir. 2011) (“While being forced into bankruptcy qualifies as a form of irreparable 11 harm, Perfect 10 has not established that the requested injunction would forestall that fate.”) (citation 12 omitted). These are two, distinct, and very different standards.

13 The Court’s preliminary injunction contained little analysis as to whether NAF’s alleged 14 harm of third-party “harassment, threats, and violent acts” was the type of harm for which 15 Defendants could be liable. Rather, the Court’s analysis primarily focused on NAF’s second burden, 16 establishing that there was a “causal connection” between Defendants’ speech and NAF’s harm 17 such that granting the injunction would remedy the harm. See Dkt. 354 at 31:14-33:3; 36:1-38:5.

18 In the newsgathering and reporting context, however, it is well-established constitutional 19 law that a defendant cannot be liable for reputational damages that flow from his reporting unless 20 the plaintiff proves defamation. Food Lion, Inc. v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc., 194 F.3d 505, 522 (4th 21 Cir. 1999) (citing Hustler Magazine v. Falwell, 485 U.S. 46 (1988)). Apparently recognizing this, the 22 Court’s preliminary injunction order takes as a given that Defendants’ investigation was 23 disingenuous, and their conclusions false. Compare Dkt. 354 at 18:18-21 (“Dr. Reeves explains that 24 he has witnessed ‘the terrible reaction towards the prior doctors’ who were featured in CMP’s 25 videos and he expects he ‘will suffer similar levels of reputational harm should a heavily edited and 26 misleading video of me be released.’”), with id. at 37:7-12 & n.42 (“Defendants miss the point in 27 their attempt to shift the responsibility to overly zealous third-parties for the . . . injury to NAF. . . .
28 The sum of defendants’ argument and evidence on this point is that they cannot be blamed for the

1 ‘hyperbolic comments of anonymous Internet commenters’ But the misleading nature of the 2 Project videos that [Defendants] have produced—reflective of the misleading nature of defendants’ 3 repeated assertions that the recordings at issue show significant evidence of criminal wrongdoing—4 have had tragic consequences. . . .”).

5 A critical point here is that NAF’s principal damages are reputational in nature. “From a 6 purely analytical standpoint, the distinction between economic and reputational damages remains 7 unsettled and is often difficult to ascertain. For instance, ‘one of the obvious ways in which a 8 defamatory remark can harm someone, particularly a business, is by causing economic losses. Such 9 damages are not distinguishable from the damages caused by the harm to reputation but rather flow 10 directly from the loss in reputation.’ Notwithstanding this analytical uncertainty, it is evident that a 11 party’s own characterization of its damage claims is highly persuasive in determining whether the 12 damages sought are ‘reputational.’” Smithfield Foods, Inc. v. United Food & Commercial Workers 13 Int’l Union, 585 F. Supp. 2d 815, 822 (E.D. Va. 2008) (quoting Alan E. Garfield, The Mischief of 14 Cohen v. Cowles Media Co., 35 GA. L. REV. 1087, 1124 (2001)).

15 Here, the complaint makes clear that NAF’s damages are reputational in nature:

16 Defendants’ brutally dishonest attacks on legitimate, life-saving 17 practices regarding lawful tissue donation are intended to target and 18 harass individual abortion providers and to trash their professional 19 reputations. The reputational harm and physical danger that NAF 20 members and other abortion providers face in the event that even 21 more selectively edited, misleading videos are released—as 22 Defendants have promised to do—is obvious and speaks for itself.

23 Dkt. 131 at 21:7-12 (emphasis added).

24 Professor Dunn is now concerned that Defendants continued their 25 illegal videotaping campaign at the annual meeting, that the 26 comments she and other panelists made were taped, that those 27 comments will be distorted and taken out of context, that her name 28 will be splashed all over the internet like Defendants’ other victims, and that she too will be the subject of a vitriolic smear campaign that would injure her professional reputation.

Id. at 39:27-40:4 (emphasis added).

Having witnessed the terrible reaction toward Drs. Nucatola and Gatter, Dr. Reeves now fears that he too will be a victim of Defendants’ smear campaign, and that he too will suffer the same reputational harm as Defendants’ first victims.

1 Id. at 40:14-17 (emphasis added).

2 Dr. Deborah Nucatola, the very physician Daleiden had secretly
 3 recorded two months earlier, and who would later become the victim 4 of Defendants’ outrageous campaign to destroy her reputation by releasing a selectively edited videotape falsely suggesting that Dr.
 Nucatola was profiting from fetal tissue donation programs.

5 Id. at 44:3-6 (emphasis added).

6 Beyond the harm to NAF and its staff, its members now fear that 7 they too will be the subject of an illegal and fraudulent campaign to smear their professional reputations.

8 Id. at 52:15-17 (emphasis added).

9 As a result of Defendants’ [breach of contract], Plaintiff and the 10 intended third-party beneficiaries described above have suffered 11 and/or will suffer economic harm and other irreparable harm caused 12 by Defendants’ breaches, including harm to the safety, security, and 13 privacy of Plaintiff and its members, harm to the reputation of Plaintiff and its members. Plaintiff has been injured by the 14 recording of NAF Confidential Information, and has incurred 15 financial losses including expenditures on security consultants and additional security measures. Plaintiff has had to divert resources . . .
to instead mitigating the harm caused by the theft of NAF Confidential Information and combatting the misrepresentations disseminated by Defendants.

16 Id. at 67:23-68:5 (emphasis added).

17 The last paragraph above specifically shows that NAF has suffered nothing but reputational 18 harm. Even the “economic” harm which NAF alleges it suffered flows directly from the harm to their 19 reputation caused by Defendants’ accusations of criminality—accusations which have been 20 determined to be true. “Under Hustler, and Food Lion, plaintiffs are not entitled to these reputational 21 and [other] damages, resulting from a publication, without showing that the publication contained a 22 false statement of fact”—which NAF now conclusively cannot do. Hornberger v. Am. Broad.
 23 Companies, Inc., 351 N.J. Super. 577, 630 (2002) (citations omitted). Even if NAF could argue that it 24 has suffered damage flowing solely from “the theft of NAF Confidential Information” and not the 25 publication of that information (Dkt. 131 at 68:3-4), it is unclear what damage that would actually 26 cause NAF, and such harm would absolutely not be irreparable. And in any event, Defendants’ 27 allegations against NAF are not false, much less delivered with actual malice, as is required to sustain 28 reputational damages.

1 2. Irreparable Injury

2 The “irreparable injury” at issue must be legally cognizable harm for which a plaintiff can 3 impose liability on a defendant—not merely harm generally. Salinger v. Colting, 607 F.3d 68, 81 (2d 4 Cir. 2010). Here, because NAF has no legally cognizable harm for which Defendants can be held 5 liable, see § 1.6, infra, it by definition has no irreparable injury. Moreover, since even the “causal 6 connection” between Defendants’ speech and NAF’s harms has been broken, maintaining the prior 7 restraint is plainly inappropriate. Nebraska Press Ass’n, 427 U.S. at 567 (“Given these practical 8 problems, it is far from clear that prior restraint . . . would have protected Simants’ rights.”).

9 3. Balance of Equities and the Public Interest

10 For the same reasons as discussed in § 1.5 above, the balance of equities and the public 11 interest favor Defendants and the dissolution of the preliminary injunction. In sum, in early 2016, 12 this Court found that: “[t]he balance of NAF’s strong showing of irreparable injury to its members’ 13 freedom of association . . . against preventing (through trial) defendants from disclosing information 14 that is of public interest but which is neither new or unique, tilts strongly in favor of NAF.” Dkt.
15 354 at 38:3-5. “[I]n order to fulfill its mission and allow candid discussions of the challenges its 16 members face . . . confidentiality agreements for NAF Meeting attendees are absolutely necessary.” 17 Id. at 32:11-13. However, now in late 2018, significant new facts and events have changed the 18 circumstances so much that the balance of equities tips strongly in Defendants’ favor. Defendant 19 Daleiden is now being charged with 15 felonies by the California Attorney General, based on the 20 video recording at NAF’s 2014 Annual Meeting and the alleged “conspiracy” to video record at 21 NAF’s 2014 and 2015 Annual Meetings.

22 Therefore, NAF’s alleged “injuries” to its First Amendment “freedom of association” 23 must now be balanced not only with Defendant Daleiden’s First Amendment rights, but also with 24 his Sixth Amendment rights. Moreover, the confusion and contradictions in the outdated 2016 25 order have already led to an even more confusing contempt proceeding and appeal, even as this 26 Court promises not to interfere with the state criminal tribunal, while at the same time enjoining 27 parties before that tribunal. This Court should admit the balance of equities has been reversed from 28 where it stood in 2016 and dissolve the outdated and unsupported preliminary injunction.

1 4. Motion for Clarification

2 In the event this Court is not inclined to fully dissolve its outdated preliminary injunction in 3 light of the changed circumstances, Defendants seek clarification that once material enters the 4 public domain, their commenting on, sharing of, or otherwise using that material would not be a 5 violation of the preliminary injunction.

6 Although a general maxim is that “the First Amendment does not confer on the press a 7 constitutional right to disregard promises that would otherwise be enforced under state law,” Cohen 8 v. Cowles Media Co., 501 U.S. 663, 672 (1991), the First Amendment right to Freedom of the Press is 9 not absolutely hollow and does confer some substantive rights. See, e.g., Animal Legal Def. Fund v.
10 Wasden, 878 F.3d 1184, 1194 (9th Cir. 2018); see also Sumar, Animal Legal Defense Fund v. Wasden 11 and Newsgathering: More Significant Than It Appears, supra, at 12.

12 This includes the right to report on criminal preliminary hearings and trials:

13 To the extent that this order prohibited the reporting of evidence 14 adduced at the open preliminary hearing, it plainly violated settled 15 principles: ‘There is nothing that proscribes the press from reporting events that transpire in the courtroom.’ . . . [O]nce a public hearing had been held, what transpired there could not be subject to prior restraint.

16 Nebraska Press Ass’n, 427 U.S. at 568 (quoting Sheppard v. Maxwell, 384 U.S. 384, 362-63 (1966)) 17 (brackets and citations omitted). “A trial is a public event. What transpires in the court room is 18 public property. . . . Those who see and hear what transpired can report it with impunity. There is 19 no special perquisite of the judiciary which enables it, as distinguished from other institutions of 20 democratic government, to suppress, edit, or censor events which transpire in proceedings before 21 it.” Craig v. Harney, 331 U.S. 367, 374 (1947).

22 This is because:

23 publication of facts surrounding [the criminal case] . . may provoke 24 substantial public concern as to the operations of the judiciary or the 25 fairness of prosecutorial decisions [and] . . . dissemination of the fact 26 that indicted individuals who had been accused of similar misdeeds in the past had not been prosecuted or had received only mild sentences may generate crucial debate on the functioning of the criminal justice system.

27 Nebraska Press Ass’n, 427 U.S. at 605-07 (Brennan, J., concurring). Indeed, “the press may be 28 arrogant, tyrannical, abusive, and sensationalist, just as it may be incisive, probing, and informative.

1 But at least in the context of prior restraints on publication, the decision of what, when, and how to 2 publish is for editors, not judges.” Id. at 613 (Brennan, J., concurring).

3 In addition, NAF’s Exhibitor Agreement does not limit the disclosure of information that is 4 publicly available. The first and last sentences of the non-disclosure provision explain that the 5 information covered by the provision is “confidential.” Dkt. 1-1, ¶17. But information is 6 “confidential” only if it is “known only to a limited few” and “not publicly disseminated.”
7 WEBSTER’S THIRD NEW INT’L DICTIONARY, UNABRIDGED 476 (2002). Any information that is 8 publicly known plainly is not “confidential.” “[O]nce confidential information is placed in the public 9 realm, it is no longer confidential.” Uniroyal Goodrich Tire Co. v. Hudson, 1996 WL 520789, at *9 (6th 10 Cir. Sept. 12, 1996) (unpublished per curiam); see also Henry Hope X-Ray Prod., Inc. v. Marron Carrel, 11 Inc., 674 F.2d 1336, 1342 (9th Cir. 1982) (“The limitation to confidential information contains the 12 implicit temporal limitation that information may be disclosed when it ceases to be confidential.”).
13 Thus, the Exhibitor Agreement plainly does not cover publicly available information.

14 Therefore, Defendants believe that, as a matter of course, as soon as enjoined materials are 15 used as evidence at Mr. Daleiden’s preliminary hearing, they will enter the public domain, and that 16 therefore the Court’s preliminary injunction will be made moot, at least as to those materials. If Mr.
17 Daleiden’s criminal case is not dismissed before then, a major part of his criminal defense strategy 18 will require the public use of those materials in a media campaign. Therefore, Defendants seek 19 clarification from this Court, should it not decide to dissolve the preliminary injunction.

20 CONCLUSION

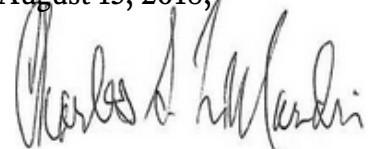

21 Events in the past two-and-a-half years have rendered the preliminary injunction outdated 22 and unsupported. In light of the congressional reports vindicating Defendants’ investigation and 23 the aggressive, politically-motivated criminal prosecution of Mr. Daleiden, Defendants respectfully 24 request that the Court dissolve its preliminary injunction. Should the Court merely modify the 25 preliminary injunction, and not dissolve it, Defendants move for clarification that using enjoined 26 materials that enter the public domain will not be a violation of the preliminary injunction.
